George Sackandy Recognized as Regional Entrepreneur of 2008

Altoona Entrepreneur One of 35 Regional Leaders Selected by Pennsylvania Business Central

(Altoona, PA - June 6, 2008) – George Sackandy has been recognized as a regional business leader in the June 6 edition of the PA Business Central newspaper. Mr. Sackandy was acknowledged among thirty-five other regional leaders for business, including Stan Sheetz, President of Sheetz Corp, Dr. Graham Spanier, President of Pennsylvania State University, Bob Poole, CEO of S&A Homes Inc., and John Dolan, CEO of First Commonwealth Financial Corp.

In 2007, Sackandy, along with Ben Mazur, Guido Santella and Gary Cornelisse, started Intelmarx, a software and solutions company based in downtown Altoona. The company's main client base is nonprofits and higher education institutions. Intelmarx has successfully created safe social networks for the Central PA United Methodist Camps and Mission Central, a warehouse that donates "relief packs" to missions and disaster relief areas.

"As CEO, George has really lead our company with his enthusiasm and energy." said Benjamin Mazur, Founder and Chief Creative Officer. "We have a clear direction and goal where this company will be in the next three years"

Harry Zimble, Editor and Publisher for the PA Business Central, examines what is an entrepreneur, and salutes the individual who "organizes and manages any enterprise, with considerable initiative and passion." People who understand that nothing is more important to the health of communities than economic development, the creation and retention of jobs that support families and enhance the quality of life in their region.

Zimble noted that "when you look up the word entrepreneur in Webster's, you're likely to see a reference to George Sackandy." Mr. Zimble also remarked on the passion that Mr. Sackandy exhibits
